

letters

To the Editor:

You and your staff are to be complimented for doing a creditable job of presenting useful Extension ideas, concepts, and educational material. Also, changes in the Journal format have improved its readability or maybe better said "reading appeal," something other professional journals could improve on.

Another dimension the Journal might consider adding and would be appreciated by many subscribers, I believe, would be a select listing of job opportu-

ities and prospective employees at both the national (state and area positions) and international level.

Keep up the good work.

CLAIR ENGLE
Jackson, Missouri

Editor's Note: We've considered publishing job opportunities, but since we're a bimonthly publication, we felt that our publications deadline wouldn't permit us to publish announcements in time for readers to meet application deadlines.

JP